COMIC READER 0.2

THE GUIDE!

Comics and manuals on your cabinet. Pages on the playfield, the cover on the backglass, where you are on the DMD.

PLAYFIELD

Your library, then the pages.

BACKGLASS

The book's cover.

DMD

The title and the page you're on.

YOUR BOOKS

SHELVES

Continue lists the books you're partway through. A book always opens on the page where you stopped.

Comics and Manuals hold your books. A folder of books is a series: it shows as a stack, and opens to its issues.

Settings has Wi-Fi upload, updates and how pages turn (page 5).

Under each cover: NEW!, the page you're on, or FINISHED!

THE PAGE

As big as the screen: 2160 pixels wide on a 4KP. The title and page number show as it opens.

PAGE TURN

The page curls over. Settings can make it a slide, or none.

jungle, but it was difficult to imagine in this fertile spot. The brook ran free and swung abruptly into a small lake where the village natives fished for food. Across the lake was a beautiful and bountiful forest. Abounding in game, it was the only hunting ground used by the numerous tribes in the vicinity.

It was Sheena's knowledge of this that made Tessa's answer seem almost absurd.

"Is there a reason why you do not eat?" Sheena asked sternly, but her eyes were questioning the boy gravely. "Are you too lazy to fish, or too frightened to hunt?"

"Tessa never lazy. Tessa frightened. All Tessa's tribe frightened. Did the great Sheena not hear of the man-killer in the lake?"

"What killer, son?" asked Bob with a frown. This sounded like trouble.

"The water monster!" Tessa breathed the words in a terror that was genuine. "He is as long as a young tree, and silent as a snake, but his great jaws are always waiting to devour anyone that goes near the lake!"

"He isn't joking, Sheena. Not according to that look on his face when he speaks of this so-called monster. What do you suppose it is? A giant croc?"

"Time is wasted trying to solve such a riddle, Bob. Come, we go

ZOOM

Start: 2x, 3x, back. The joystick moves around; the text sharpens when you stop.

Next pages are ready before you get there: the app draws ahead while you read, so turning is instant. A scanned PDF takes longest, about a second a page.

Manga: Settings > Reading direction > Right to left swaps the flippers, so the left one turns forward. A book marked as manga in its ComicInfo.xml reads that way by itself.

B while zoomed shows the whole page again; B on the whole page goes back to the library. Your place is saved.

WHAT'S THIS BOOK? DETAILS

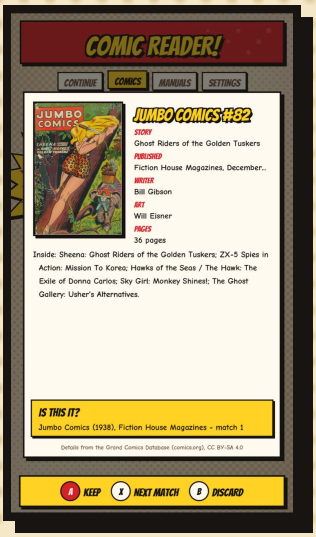

Press Y on a book in the library: its cover, series and issue, the story, who published it and when, the writer and artist, a summary, and how far in you are.

The details come from a ComicInfo.xml file inside the comic, the tag file most comic tools write. A book with one shows as "Daredevil Comics #1" in the library and on the DMD, not by its file name.

NO COMICINFO? LOOK IT UP

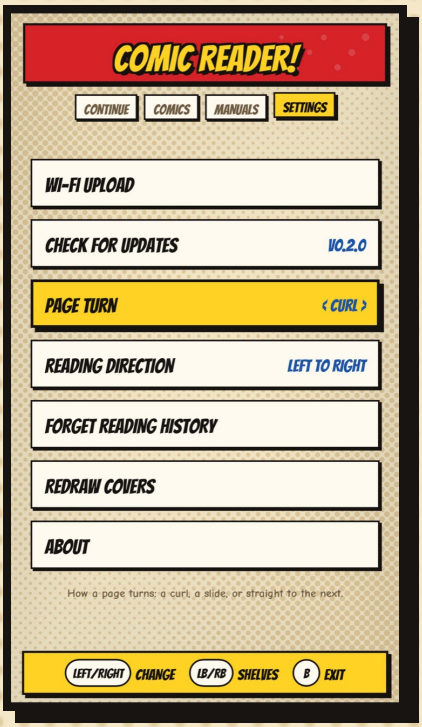

1. On the details, press X. The series and issue number are read from the name: `Jumbo_Comics_082.cbr` is Jumbo Comics #82.
2. It's looked up in the Grand Comics Database (comics.org), which knows the story, date, credits and what's inside.
3. "Is this it?" A keeps it, X tries another series with that number, B drops it. Kept details stay in the app; your file isn't changed.

The cabinet needs the internet for this. comics.org allows a few dozen lookups an hour for each home; if it asks you to wait, it says for how long. Details: Grand Comics Database, CC BY-SA 4.0.

MAKE IT YOURS

SETTINGS

Wi-Fi upload: send books from a phone or computer (next page).

Check for updates: gets the newest version from GitHub and restarts into it. Your books, places and settings stay.

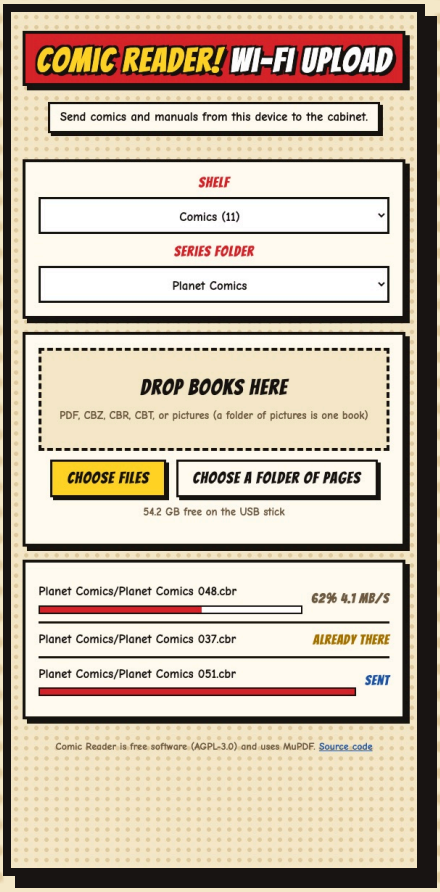

Page turn: Curl, Slide or None. Reading direction: Left to right, or Right to left for manga. Change them with the joystick.

Forget reading history: clears Continue and every book's place. Redraw covers: draws every cover again.

About: the version, the license and who made what.

ADDING BOOKS

WI-FI UPLOAD

1. In Settings, open Wi-Fi upload. The cabinet shows an address and a PIN.
2. On a phone or computer on the same network, open the address and enter the PIN.
3. Pick Comics or Manuals, and a series (or make a new one).
4. Drop in files, or a folder of page pictures. B on the cabinet when they're sent.

OR ON THE USB STICK

Put books in `external/comic-reader/comics/` or `manuals/`. A folder of books makes a series: `comics/Planet Comics/Planet Comics 037.cbr`

WHAT IT OPENS

PDF, CBZ, CBR and CBT comics, single pictures (JPG, PNG, WebP, GIF, BMP, TIFF), and a folder of pictures as one book, its pages in name order.
